While the picture above is an exact reproduction of the photograph, it does but slight justice to the beautiful young lady it is intended to portray, for she is very lovely of face and feature as well as faultless in figure. Miss Griggs was born at Ottawa, Ill., where she still resides. After graduating at Waterman Hall she took a post graduate course at Belv.ont College, Nashville, Tenn., where she met Miss Isabella Bailey, and the two became very fast friends. She is now a guest at the Bailey home, and all who have met her are charmed with her grace of manner and fine conversational gifts. Belonging to a family noted for its refinement and intellectuality, she inherits these qualities in a marked degree as well as the independent nature of her revolutionary ancestors, who were prominent in the stirring times of the young republic. UNABLE TO BEAT GOEBEL

THE OPPOSITION IS TRYING TO BREAK UP THE CONVENTION.

ALL SORTS OF REVOLUTIONARY AND AND DISGRACEFUL TACTICS EMPLOYED.

NO NOMINATION YET AND CONVENTION ADJOURNED TO 10 A. M. TO-DAY.

The situation at Louisville seems to be that the opposition seeing they were beaten, and unable to agree on which should tackle Senator Goebei alone, have resorted to dilatory and revolutionary tactics to prevent the nomination of the man from Kenton. The interests of the party seem to be lost sight of, reason has departed and riot and disorder have taken its place. It is a dark day for Kentucky democracy when such things are permitted to exist in a convention that should be marked by order, harmony and pa-

This from the Louisville Times tells the whole story of yesterday:" Finding that the forces of Hardin and Stone could not be completely combined upon either of these two candidates and that the dropping of either would probably result in the nomination of Senator Goebel, the L. & N's representatives, under the direction of John Whallen, John Thompson, John S. Rhea, Willard Mitchell and others, have been seeking all day to break up the conven-They seized upon the presence of a few police as a pretext and declar ed tney would not permit business to proceed un til they were put out of the hall. Amid great confusion a bal lot was taken, the Hardin men in the main refusing to vote. The result was Goebel 334, Stone 261, Hardin

After a second fruitless ballot the convention adjourned to 10 A. M. today.

The committee on credentials was ready to report at the night session the hall and so much disorder that it was decided to adjourn till 9 A. M., Saturday, at which hour the reports were read. The majority report seated the Goebel-Stone delegations in Ballard, Caldwell, McCracken and Warren counties, city of Louisville, Campbell, Scott, Harrison, Nicholas and Pike Murray, W. C. Goebel had seven votes more than enough to nominate at one time on the original ballot, before the recapitulated vote, but rapid changes cut the vote

At the night session all hands had cooled off and balloting with all three of the candidates proceeded for five hours and until 11:20 saturday night, wher the last, which was the 11th ballot, showed Goebel 346‡, Hardin 365‡ and Stone 376%. The convention then adjourned till 10 o'clock Monday.

Notwithstanding he was the hindmost candidate, Mr. Goebel had a motion put to drop the hindmost man after a certain ballot Saturday night, but it was lost by a vote of 715 to 377, the other candidates being confident that he had a card up his sleeve.

The constant threat of certain Hardin men to bolt, hurt their man very much. Fortunately John B. Thompson, his manager, never took any stock in the proposition, as he knows none but whipped men resort to such action.

The resolution presented by Blackburn, Bronston, Owsley and others proposing a constitutional amendment to return to viva voce voting was referred to the committee on resolutions but was not reported, the more's the pity. The secret ballot has resulted in endless woes to the party and has made fraud possible and practicable.

A midnight conference between the leaders of Stone and Hardin was held Sunday, when it was agreed that the man they had to beat was Goebel and that it stood them in hand to fight the battle together, but they couldn't agree upon which should be dropped.

"The party I love dearer than life itself is in the hands of cut-throats and assassins," said Red Fox Bronston, who is given as much to fighting wind mills as the late Don Quixote.

THE PLATFORM.

The platform as adopted reaffirms without the slightest qualification, the principles and policies declared in the democratic national platform adopted at Chicago in 1896 and reiterates its faith in bimetallism which has been vindicated by events.

The national administration is condemned for its reckless extravagance, for its cruel and inhuman neglect in its treatment of our soldiers and sailors during the late Spanish war, for its complete subordination to the interest of organized wealth, for its protection and encouragement of trusts and combinations, and especially for its appointment and retention in office of an attorney general devoted to the interests of trusts and combinations.

The State administration is condemned for alleged corrupt methods and inefficiency.

Trusts and high tariff bills are denounced and remedies suggested. The Goebel election bill is endorsed and so are the McChord bill and the Chinn bill to prevent extortionate charges for school books.

Legislative measures against railroad rate discrimination is recommen-

KENTUCKY HOUSES OF REFORM

At a point about five miles northwest of Lexington and one-half mile from Greendale Station on the Cincinnati Southern Road in Fayette county, there is at present under construction an institution which is attracting con siderable attention, not only throughout the State of Kentucky but throughout the country in general. This is to be known as the Kentucky Houses of Reform, and is being constructed under a special law passed by the legislature at its 1896 session, and for which the sum of $100,000 was appropriated for its immediate needs. In addition to this sum Fayette county and the city of Lexington set aside $13,000 for the use of the institution, upon condition that it be located in Fayette county and within five miles of the city of Lexington. While the amount of money appropriated thus far for the work is by no means adequate to finally complete the same, the trustees have by judicious and economical management been able thus far to contract for a sufficient number of the buildings and sufficient equipment to put the institution in operation this year and to take care of about 175 to 200 boys and 25 to 30 girls.

The trustees having the work in charge are Mrs. L E. Yandell and Mrs. Nellie Garrard Cheatham of Louisville; Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp and Mesers. William Worthington, of Lexington, W. P. Walton, Stanford and D. H. Howard of Lebanon, and to them certainly great credit is due for the amount of work which has been accomplished, and for the manner in which they have devoted their time and attention to the gathering of information that would enable them to establish for the State such an institution as would rank first among those of similar kind in the country, and enable them to secure for the State the greatest possible value for the amount of money appropriated for this purpose.

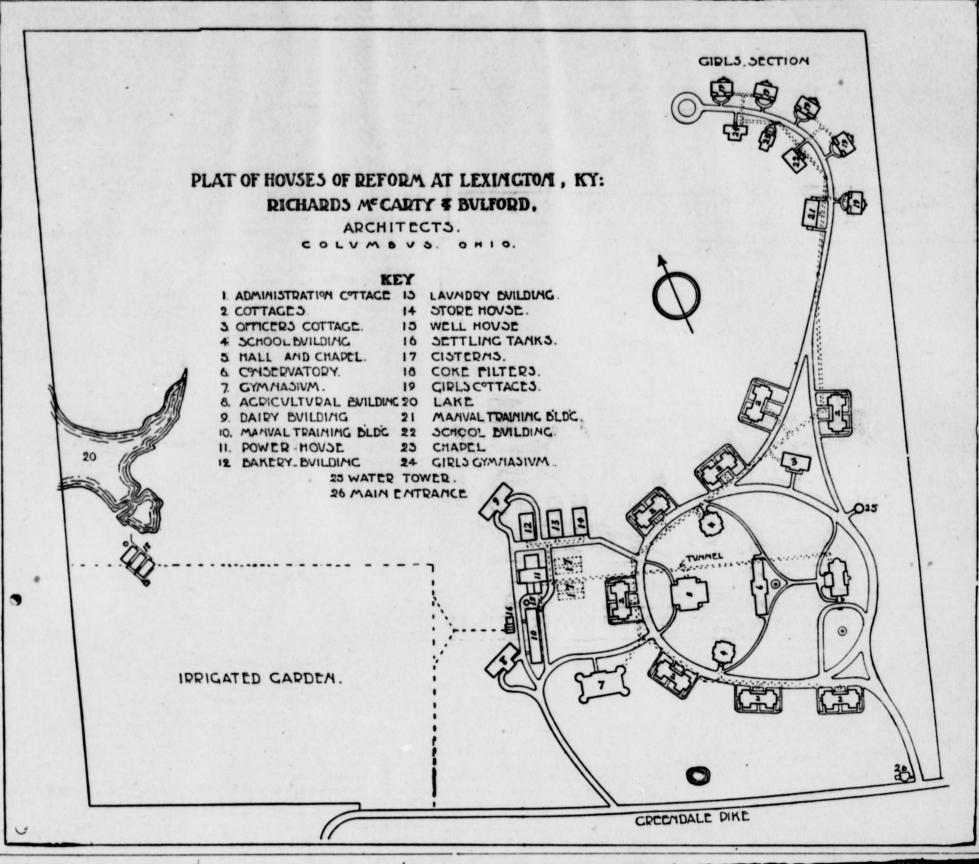

To properly establish and equip and start off in working order an institution of the magnitude contemplated by the law under which this one is created is a work of no small magnitude, and when properly started its operation and maintenance are comparatively easy. To the end that there might be no serious mistakes made in starting this institution the Board visited a large number of institutions of a similar character, learning from them many things that should be done, gathering information on other points where other institutions bad made fatal errors and are now being recon

In all modern institutions of this character the department of physical culture forms an important factor in the educational work, and buildings for this especial purpose have been provided in this institution. These build ings will be equipped with modern gymnasium apparatus as it is not only a question of children receiving the proper amount of exercise, but it is essential that this exercise should be directed in the right channels for the purpose of bringing about a proper equalization of the physical forces.

The heating and ventilating of each of the buildings upon the ground is to be by what is known as the blast system, a fan being located in the basement of each of the buildings of sufficient capacity to furnish at all times an abundant supply of tempered fresh air. With this system the impure conditions of the atmosphere, so often met with in institutions not properly heated and ventilated, are done away with and there is no danger that the condition of the buildings will become either unpleasant or unhealthful.

Two systems of water works have been provided for; hard water from deep wells for fire protection, drinking heads reached one level, the hero lifted and culinary purposes, it having de- his own quickly and kissed the freshveloped that an abundant supply of colored face that looked so intently at pure water is to be found at a depth of him. 200 feet. In addition to this filters and cisterns have been provided as shown on the plat for taking care of the rain water from the entire institution. This soft water will be used for bathing and laundry purposes and for the boiler supply.

Provision has been made for taking care of the sewage from the institution by what is known as the intermitent filteration and broad irrigation system. which has by actual experience beem demonstrated as thoroughly successful, not only in institution work, but in world. Broad irrigation of the land is needed. Alma was a slender, darkespecially suitable as a means of disposing of the sewage of this institution, as there are no streams of suitable size for taking care of the effluent, and farming being not only an aid to the institution itself, but supplying a healthful and instructive outdoor labor for the inmates. There is nothing unhealthful in the work of caring for irriigated areas or in the use of vegetables thus fertilized, decomposition taking place in the presence of sufficient oxy an extra precaution the effluent from the institution will be passed through coke filters, by which it is possible to remove from 96 to 98 per cent. of the organic matter.

As it is impossible with the present available appropriation to complete the institution, and it is highly necessary that it should be in operation at the earliest possible date, plans have been prepared and contracts let by the Baard for the Manual Training Building, Boiler House and three Cottages and these buildings are now under construction. . The institution will from the time of the completion of these buildings be in complete working order in the most essential features, and the labor of the boys taken care of can be made a source of profit in the construction of future buildings as well as a benefit in a manual training line to the boys so engaged It is expected that the buildings now under construction will be completed ready for occupancy in the early

TIM BRANIGAN'S COURTSHIP By B. W. Channing

BRANNIGAN carried ice for the Sylvan Spring Ice company. He was a goodly young fellow, standing six feet one in his stockings, with a countenance deeply bronzed by weather, out of which his wide blue eyes laughed unceasingly. His flannel shirt, open a little at the base of the strong, round throat, and his broad felt hat, indented with a vertical "Denver poke," gave him a cowbow effect. He was perfectly cognizant of this, and traded on it with the maids at the various houses on his beat, before whom he swaggered not a little, dropping hints of a western past, strewn with Indian scalps.

"And was you ever there, now, Mr. Brannigan?" one of them once asked him, and he answered, ambiguously:

"Aw, an' if I hadn't a-been, how would I get the wownd on me crown?" "What wownd on your crown? Go on!

"I'll show it ye if ye'll step over

But he was to learn that there was a type of womanhood demanding more deferential approach.

The first time he saw Alma was on a hot afternoon in August, when she had just come down from Nova Scotia, and was feeling the atmosphere of the South end oppressive.

Her mother, who kept a boarding house, and had combined with that responsibility the care of a shiftless second husband and his two small boys, some of the principal cities of the had written to Halifax that Alma was haired girl, with a delicate complexion, and slim, ladylike hands.

Brannigan, swinging in with his huge ice block, took a swift, apprelook at her, dumped the ice in its receptacle, and stopped on the return swing for conversation.

" 'Tis a warm day!" "Dreadful!" said Alma, listlessly.

"I didn't see you before?"

"No. I've just come." "Ye'll not stay here! the old lady ean't kape no gyurl more than a week; 'tis a hole of a place!"

"I'm Mrs. Brown's daughter, from Halifax.'

Brannigan went away at that, suddenly speechless.

He saw her nearly every day after, but he did not seem to make much headway. A packet of chewing gum, which had appeared to him a graceful attention suitable from any gentleman to any lady, was received with disappointing coldness. "It's very kind of you," she said, "but I never use it. Mrs. Dalby, where I lived in Halifax, thought it was common."

One day about a month after her arrival, he found Alma alone in the kitchen-and marked with concern that her eyes were red with crying. Now, Brannigan had a man's philosophy regarding tears.

"Aren't ye well at all?" he asked, coming up beside her. "I'm all right!" said Alma, holding her head down, and plunging her thin little arms into a tub of soapsuds.

The next moment she was startled and scandalized by the clasp of an arm about her waist, and the touch of a brown mustache on her cheek.

"Ah, cheer up!" whispered Brannigan, tenderly, "it don't sthorm ivery

He stepped back to avoid the expected slap; but the girl made no sort of demonstration. She simply stood there with a white face and looked unutterable reproach.

Tacties of so novel a kind were discomposing. Brannigan's bronzed cheek flamed, and the laugh died out of his eyes.

"Say. I'm mighty sorry!" he murmured; "I niver thought but ye'd like it! The gyurls mostly does, an' 'tis no harm at all." "I'm not that kind," said Alma, sternly.

"I'm mighty sorry," he repeated, and as Alma showed no signs of relenting, went dejectedly to the door.

"'Twas sweet, what I got of it," he mused, "an' 'tis bad luck I'll get no more. She's not the kind, it's true for able that a good-natured one has a to the house he did not see Alma, and when he did, on the fourth day, her manner was excessively dignified. But Brannigan was bard to snub. Instinctively, he reconstructed his too florid vocabulary, and altered some of his ways. "She's worth takin' trouble for," he said to himself.

His gentle persistence had its reward, and after awhile they had become so far friends that Brannigan hazarded a new departure.

"Do you iver go out Sunday avenins?" he inquired one fine Saturday.
"Sunday afternoons I do," Alma

"'Tis great out in the park."

"I've heard it was nice."
"I'd be proud if ye'd ride out there with me tomorry?"
Alma's delicate color deepened. She gazed fixedly at the handle of the door. "Let's say three o'clock." "I'm not through my work till four." It was the same thing as an assent.

beaming, but her voice made him turn back in sudden panic.
"Don't call for me," she said, in a low. hesitating tone; "you-I'd rather you wouldn't. Maybe I'll be at the corner at four." The ride out on the open car was very pleasant. Alma enjoyed every bit of it. though she asked herself frequently what was she about. Brannigan was not introspective; besides, he knew what he was about perfectly. He paid Alma's fares with an authority she dared not gainsay, and sat with his arm on the back of the seat behind her. His heart swelled; he almost wished some man would do something for which he could knock him down. He had the primitive instincts of the tribal lover; he wanted to show his strength to the woman he desired, and to have her know that strength would always stand between her and danger. This feeling increased as time went on, and he saw more and more clearly that Alma was unhappy at home. Her eyes were often red. She complained of headache, and on being pressed confessed that "the boys were tiresome." One afternoon a strange man came with the ice. "Tim Brannigan's hurt," he explained. It appeared that Brannigan had been at a fire, and rushing out of the burning tenement with a forgotten baby, had broken his leg. He was in the city hospital.

The next day Alma dressed herself with care in the blue gown Brannigan liked, and the Sunday hat with its soaring plumes and outspreading ribbons, and started for the hospital. When Brannigan saw Alma enter the feebly. Alma looked down at his splendid porportions in perfect seriousness. "Do you feel pain anywhere?" she asked, fearfully. "Ahful, just here!" said Brannigan, laying a muscular hand upon the cardiac region.

Not a muscle of her face changed, as he saw through his half-shut eyes. A ripple of laughter passed over him, and he bit his lips under the long, tawny mustache. And while he laughed, he could have fallen at her feet-she was so adorably innocent!

Alma saw and wholly misinterpreted the tremor which shook him.

"Are you cold?" she inquired, anxfously. She knew that it was a bad sign to feel cold in serious illness.

"Froze out!" said Brannigan, in a choked voice, another and more violent tremor convulsing him. "Don't they give you anything for a chill?" she asked. "They can't give me nothin'," he whispered, "'twouldn't do no good!"

Poor Alma began to cry. She did not know people never died of a broken leg; and with Brannigan's young strength and health it was inexplicable. But, certainly, he was near his end. Reckless of observation, she bent her face to his and kissed him.

And then a strange thing happened, for the helpless sufferer revived, returned her farewell salute with interest, and held the girl close in a clasp of astonishing vigor.

"O, my! Mr. Brannigan, aren't you ashamed? And me thinking you that ill!" gasped Alma.

"I niver told ye there was anything wrong wid me arms!" he cried. I was just sufferin' for a kiss, dear! Ye've niver let me have one till now! (he repaid himself for the deprivation). Ah, Alma, darlin', say ye'll go to the priest wid me when I'm out o' here! I've a tidy bit in the bank, an' niver a soul dependin' on me, an' I'd make ye so happy ye'd not know yerself-" became aware of the severely-disapproving regard of a middle-aged nurse on the other side of the bed, and let Alma go. Then he winked with glad effrontery at the intruder.

"Tis all right!" he assured her; "kissin' ain't agin the rules whin it's a man's own gyurl he's goin' to marryis it, now? An' ye're goin' to marry me the minute I'm out, aren't ye, Alma, me dear?

Alma was torn with a variety of emotions; but she loved Brannigan. "Yes," she said .- Boston Globe.

HE house in which Mr. William Johnson carried on the business of money lender and financial agent was in no way different from those surrounding it save that the downstairs front window bore the legend "Loan Office" in large black letters on a white ground. A quiet, orderly, middle-aged man was Mr. Johnson, and people who met him in the street and did not know him would have taken him for anything rather than a man who put out his money to usury.

Certainly there was nothing of the Shylock about him as he sat one spring morning in his dingy office over a much thumbed account book. He was a tall, spare, loosely-built man, with a pale face and a thin, straggling crop beard and whiskers that always looked as if it had grown in patches. Usually, when he was not talking to his clients, he carried a quill pen in his mouth; there was something in this habit that gave him the appearance of an abstracted poodle carrying a stick.

Mr. Johnson was deeply engrossed in the consideration of a certain entry in his account book when the door of the loan office opened very suddenly and set the bell ringing with sharp dis-sonance. He heard a light step in the little lobby, which was partitioned off from the rest of the room. For a moment he did not answer the summons of the bell-it was never wise to be in too much haste to welcome callers. But presently he rose and opened the door, the quill pen still retaining its hori-zontal position in his mouth. He lifted his eyes carelessly from the little swing counter to the person who stood behind it. He was not easily surprised, for he had seen many strange things in his time, but what he now saw surprised him into a vague, uncomfortable si-

Behind the little counter stood a 19 years, fashionably dressed, evidently of good position and palpable refine-ment. Her pretty, fresh face, revealing itself to Mr. Johnson's astonished eyes from beneath the ravishments of a much beflowered picture hat, seemed strangely out of keeping with the dingy color of the little lobby.

"Oh-er-ve are Mr. William John son?" she said.

"Yes," answered Mr. Johnson. "You-er, you-lend money, don't

"Yes," said Mr. Johnson again. "I-I want to borrow some money," she said, looking out of half-averted eyes at the money lender. Mr. Johnson's first impulse was to stretch out his hand for one of the application forms which stood ready in a small box on the counter. But upon reflection he lifted the swinging shelf and asked his new client to step inside. When she had passed into the office he closed the door and joined her and from sheer force of habit he restored the quill pen to his mouth. The girl saw the resemblance to the abstracted poodle, and a smile rippled over her face. Mr. Johnson did not observe it:

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to care deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tubs. When this tube gets inflamed you have a runbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the nucous surfaces.

"Well, thanks, Mr. Johnson, and goodbay—you'll see me on the first of July dead certain, you know."

On the first of July Mr. Johnson sat in his office in a state of nervous expectancy; but the nervousness hade nothing to do with the money which was due from Miss Lattimer. All the morning he waited and all the afternoon and still
